In the past 10 years, BJP has gained virtual control of all the major milk unions of Gujarat. Ramsinh Parmar was the last non-BJP chairman of GCMMF but he too left the Congress and joined the BJP in 2017. Within a year, Parmar got unanimously elected the chairman of GCMMF which has virtually become a 'Congress-mukt' federation.

Since the late Dr Verghese Kurien stepped down as the chairman in 2006, party politics has been the decisive factor in choosing a chairman. Commenting on the politicisation of the milk federation, Chairman of Gujarat State Cooperative Union Ghanshyam Amin told Mirror, "About 10 years ago, there were many unions headed by the Congressmen including the milk unions in the State. However, over the period of time BJP's gained hold on GCMMF."

Citing the example of Anand milk union, Amin said, "When Congress had hold over the union, they never brought politics into their decisions. They thought about the benefits to milk producers and I believe most members would be following the same practice." Currently, the member unions of GCMMF procure an average 240 lakhs litre of milk every day from 36 lakh milk producers in 18,562 villages. This, according to the experts, gives them access to these households whom they can influence during polls.
